Additive Manufacturing
Revolutionizing Industry

1. What's additive manufacturing?
   Additive manufacturing is a process whereby a wide range of products can be created by depositing materials, such as metal or plastic, one layer at a time. It is also known as 3D printing.

2. Ways that additive manufacturing is revolutionizing industry
   - Additive manufacturing is making products in ways that were previously impossible.
   - With additive manufacturing, companies can create products that were previously unaffordable or impossible to make.
   - Additive manufacturing is making products that were previously unaffordable or impossible to make.

3. Products created using additive manufacturing
   - Additive manufacturing is being used to create a wide range of products, from medical implants to airplane parts.
   - Additive manufacturing is making products that were previously unaffordable or impossible to make.

SPLaser is an additive manufacturing solutions provider, offering a wide range of services and products to help companies make the most of this exciting technology.